Carver High School

Readers! Another week has come and gone. Semester exams are staring everyone in the face. They should not be too difficult, however.

Students who are appearing on the Carver High School program on Station WLVA Saturday, Jan. 26, are working very hard to make it a big event. Tune in at 12:35 P. M.

Stencils for the Carver Herald are being cut by such typists as Sarah Watkins, Jacqueline Lawing, and Ann Lawing. They are doing a good job.

The Science Club held its meeting Monday. The main objective was planning ways to get funds for the group to make their trip to Hampton Institute in April.

The tenth grade boys seem to be very interested in a coming event—the N. F. A. banquet.

The ninth grade class is still minus their homeroom teacher, Miss Finney. Her condition is much improved and her return to school is expected soon.

Classes are working hard to fill their infantile paralysis gleaners.

The eleventh grade French class is doing fine. You should hear them translating the French letters.

The N. H. A. girls plan to hold a meeting Wednesday, January 23, with Miss Myra Thompson, State N. H. A. advisor, as their guest.

N. H. A. girls will hold their annual Blue and White Ball on March 19.

Yvonne Stevens still uses those "Hotshot" words. Believe she is learning a new dance. She is trying so hard.

Lennie McCoy and Fannie West had new hair styles Wednesday.

Eighth graders are wondering why Maxine Ferguson and Willie Braxton haven't been chatting during recess as usual.

Tenth graders have just begun their review in Biology for exams. Girls in this class are now on their cooking unit in Home Ec.

Several tenth graders are to appear on the broadcast Saturday.

This winds up our news for now. Until next week:

The highest peak hasn't been climbed yet.

The mightiest rives aren't spanned, don't worry and fret.

The chances have just begun, for the best jobs haven't been started.

The best work hasn't been done."

Americans Disappointed by Red's List of 3,198 Prisoners-of-War

LAUGHTER AND TEARS—Tears and laughter echoed in the home towns of America. The Communists handed over their list of American prisoners, containing 3,198 names.

For mothers and fathers, sweethearts and wives, of these 3,198 there was laughter and one of the happiest holiday seasons on record. But for other thousands there were tears and despair.

The nation as a whole, however, was shocked and disappointed by the list. What had happened to the remaining 11,559 American soldiers known missing in Korea?

A civilian employee of the Defense department's public information office hands reporters the first list of names of 3,198 American prisoners-of-war as reported by the Communists.

There was no answer to this question. But all too well the people of America remember the stories of atrocities made public recently in Korea.

And even as thousands were rejoicing at word that their fighting men are still alive, the Department of Defense and President Truman warned that the Communist prisoner-of-war reports are completely unverified. The enemy has refused to permit Red Cross inspection of its camps.

White House Secretary Joseph Short told newsmen: "The President has asked me to urge every news medium to stress as often as possible that the prisoner-of-war list is entirely unverified.

"He appreciates the efforts already made along this line but believes it important to continue them—to do even more than already has been done.

"This country has no way of verifying whether the list is accurate or inaccurate, true or false, complete or incomplete.

"For the sake of the families whose sons are missing in action, everyone should treat this list with skepticism."

But for the mothers of America there was one reaction: "Thank God for such wonderful news. It answers tens of thousands of prayers."

Shortly after the names of Americans on the Communist list was made public, the UN handed the Reds a stiffly-worded note demanding that the enemy account for more than 1,000 prisoners not named. The UN contends these prisoners had been named in earlier Communist propaganda broadcasts, but were not on the prisoner-of-war list. What has become of them, the UN wants to know?

EUROPE'S UNITY—There has been a growing feeling in the rural sections of America that the countries of western Europe are making little progress toward unity in spirit or force. Secretary of State Acheson, however, believes otherwise.

Acheson said recently that Europeans have made more progress in the last four years toward bringing about this unity than they did in the previous five centuries. As examples, he pointed out the six-nation Europe-army program and the Schuman plan for pooling coal and steel resources.

One of the main blocks in the formation of the Europe-army is the British unwillingness to contribute troops to such an organization. Before the plan can succeed as planned by General Eisenhower, the British will have to change their policy which dates from the time of Queen Elizabeth.

COST-OF-LIVING—As 1951 came to a close, the Bureau of Labor Statistics released figures on the cost-of-living for the American family. The bureau's index hit a new peak of 10.8 per cent above the level of June, 1950, when the Korean war broke out.

The bureau said the rising costs of miscellaneous goods and services, and higher prices for fresh fruits and vegetables, were largely responsible for the increase.

NEW BLACKMAIL—Hungary, with a record of holding American citizens to gain concessions from the United States, has embarked again upon the blackmail trail. This time she is holding four U. S. airmen whose plane was forced down by Soviet fighter planes after it strayed across the Hungarian border.

The Soviet puppet says she will bring to trial the four airmen who violated the Hungarian border "with the criminal intentions of dropping spies and diversionists in the territory of the Hungarian Republic."

Last year Hungary jailed American businessman Robert A. Vogeler on charges of espionage and later released him after the U. S. agreed to a number of concessions.

It is now but a matter of time before the Hungarians ask for more concessions. And if the blackmail works as before, the airmen will be released after much propaganda and the concessions granted.

THE BIG TRAGEDY—Among other things, the year 1951 will be remembered for the big tragedy—the millionth traffic fatality.

The nation's tragic parade of motor vehicle accident deaths began September 13, 1899. H. H. Bliss, victim No. 1, was killed by a horseless carriage in New York City.

Heavy snow and ice-crusted highways and the fact that thousands of Americans made holiday trips, contributed to the traffic death rate rise in the year.

U. S. BALKS—For the first time in the history of the United Nations, the United States balked at the levy it must pay to help maintain that organization. The U. S. cited its huge expenditures in the Korean war and the billions spent to uphold the charter principles which the United Nations was not in a position to implement.

The assembly, however, approved a 1952 budget of $48,096,780, of which the U. S. will pay 36.9 per cent. Although less than last year's levy, the U. S. objected that no state should pay more than one third of the budget.

The British are to pay 10.56 per cent of the fiscal year 1952 and the Soviet Union, the Ukraine, and White Russia 11.49 per cent.

Meeting for the first time since World War II, two old friends, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower (left) and Prime Minister Winston Churchill (right) met in Paris recently for a series of conferences on the European army plan. Eisenhower was understood to have made a fervent appeal to Churchill to give more encouragement to the plan. There were also reports circulated after Churchill returned to England that Eisenhower expressed his willingness to "stay on the job" for a longer period if Britain would give greater support to the plan.

MEAT FORECAST

Smaller Spring Pig Crop in Prospect

Hopes for a larger supply of pork products in butcher shops next year and lower prices received a jolt as the government's forecast of a 9 per cent reduction in next spring's pig crop. It may mean noticeably higher meat prices, the Department of Agriculture believed. A department survey indicated the 1952 pig crop would number 57,500,000 head, compared with 61,957,000 last spring, and 55,407,000 for the 10-year (1940-49) average.

Responsibility of the reduction in production rests largely with a dwindling supply of corn and other livestock feeds. For the past two years the nation has been using grains at a faster rate than it has produced them. The deficit has been taken from reserves accumulated in 1948 and 1949.

To Hold "See Virginia Week"

RICHMOND, Jan. 12—Dowell J. Howard, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, today endorsed the idea of "See Virginia Week," March 10-15. He expressed his belief that public schools throughout the state might well take advantage of the plan to introduce school children to the historic shrines and natural wonders of Virginia which are of national importance. At the same time, "See Virginia Week" would serve to re-introduce many adult Virginians to these same shrines and attractions.

It has been found through surveys that out-of-state visitors far outnumber Virginians in visits to the many places of nation-wide interest within the Commonwealth. In order to encourage Virginians to know their own state better, Governor John S. Battle has proclaimed March 10-15 as "See Virginia Week."

Special programs and features are planned for this period at many of the Virginia shrines and similar activities are in the planning stage at others. The Virginia Travel Council through its school and intra-state committees is activating "See Virginia Week" and encouraging as many school groups as possible to take advantage of this special period.

The Virginia Education Association has also endorsed the project and is cooperating through its regional groups.

Advises Early Obtainment Of Mold Control Materials

Stock up early on materials and equipment to be used in blue mold control next season.

That's the advice to tobacco growers from S. B. Fenne, plant pathologist at VPI, who says there is always a possibility of supply shortages.

Ferbam, sold under various trade names, is still recommended. Though ferbam is more generally available and more commonly used in Virginia, certain other materials can be used. Zineb, also sold under various trade names, is very effective.

Fenne says in preparing the spray the concentrated chemical should be used, while a ready-mixed diluted material should be used for dusting. Buy enough to last the entire season; figure on about 2 to 3 pounds of ferbam for each 100 square yards of plant bed. If dusting is preferred buy about 25 pounds of a ready-mixed dust for each 100 square yards of plant bed. The materials you don't use during the year will be just as good the following year if they are stored under dry conditions.

There are many satisfactory kinds and types of spraying equipment. For very small areas of 100 yards or so, the knapsack sprayer will do. However, a larger rig such as a bucket or barrel-type, or a small power-driven sprayer, will be much more satisfactory. In any case, the sprayer should be large enough to give at least 100 pounds pressure so all plants will be covered with each application.

If you prefer to dust, a rotary type hand-operated duster is satisfactory. The small puff type duster is not recommended, since it is practically impossible to do a through job.
